West Midlands Pension Fund responds to questions on investment practices

Following the articles on pension fund investments in tobacco and alcohol, in the Birmingham Mail (November 23, 2015) and Coventry Telegraph (November 22, 2015), West Midlands Pension Fund would like to clarify its position on the matter.

The Fund's Pensions Committee has decided not to exclude investments on ethical grounds. The Fund recognises that members hold varying and sometimes conflicting views of what is acceptable for a wide range of environmental, social and governance (ESG) issues. From a pure financial perspective, if companies indirectly or directly involved in subjectively deemed unethical activities were excluded for investment purposes, there would be very few companies left in which to invest. This means that the Fund holds investments that some would find objectionable including companies linked to the alcohol and tobacco sector. The Committee ultimately recognises the importance of a well-diversified portfolio.

The Committee prefers to follow an approach of active shareholder engagement to help influence the corporate behaviour of the companies in which it invests in order to protect shareholder value. There is risk but also opportunity in companies that have weak governance of financially material ESG issues. Instead of excluding such companies from our portfolio as a matter of principle, the Fund prefers to adopt a policy of risk monitoring and engagement in order to protect and enhance shareholder value. This allows the Fund to use its influence as an active owner with other like-minded investors to improve ESG practices in its investee companies, influence that would be lost through a divestment approach. If there is a serious issue and the company fails to act, then Fund would make representations to the company expressing our concerns and may vote against the company management at a shareholder meeting.

The Fund's responsible investment (RI) strategy is entirely consistent with its fiduciary obligations as it aims to integrate financially material ESG issues into its investment approach. Further details regarding the Fund's RI approach including its RI Framework can be found on its website here: <http://www.wmpfonline.com/ri>
